

THROUGH THE CAMERA'S EYE

French soldiers building military roads behind the lines in the Somme, where the greatest battle in history is being fought. The stones for the roads are brought up by canal barges.

(Copyright by International Film Service.)

George ("Duffy") Lewis, former left fielder for the Boston Red Sox, who won fame in two world series, is now a chief petty officer in the Navy.

(Photo from Underwood & Underwood.)

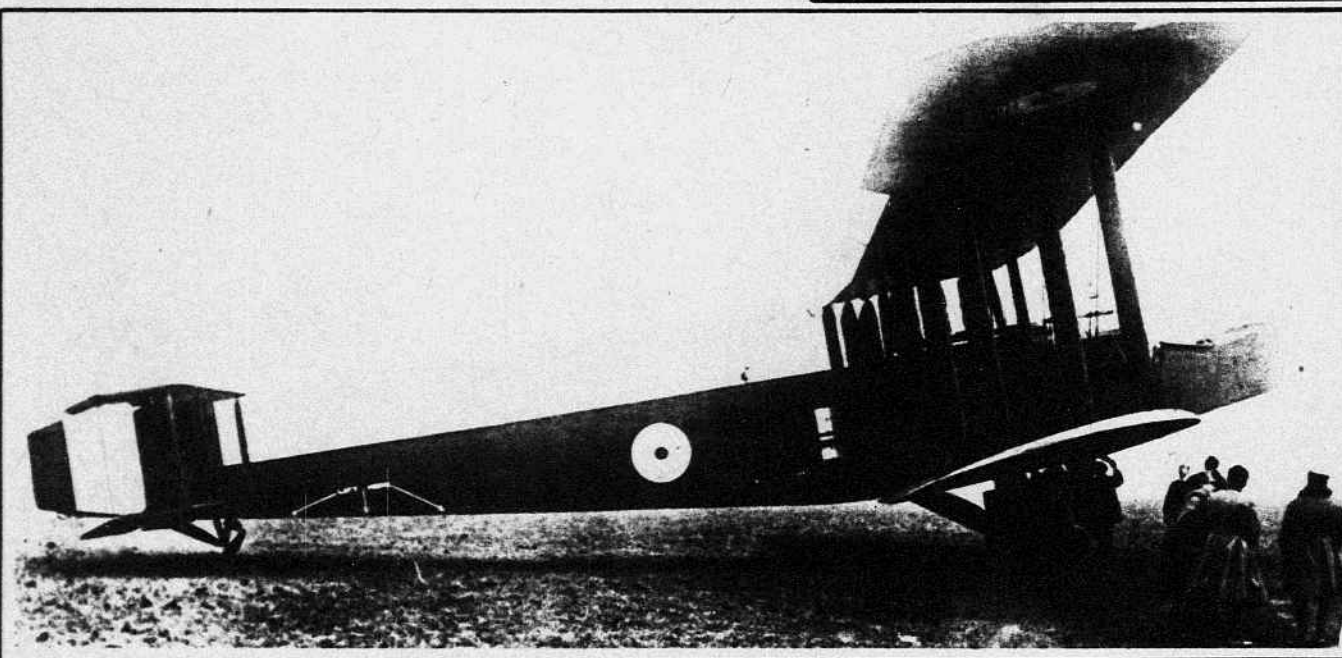

Lieut. J. H. Craige, U. S. M. C., former University of Pennsylvania star athlete and for eight years holder of A. A. U. eastern middleweight boxing championship, is athletics director for the big Marine Corps encampment at Quantico, Va.

(Copyright by Harris & Ewing.)

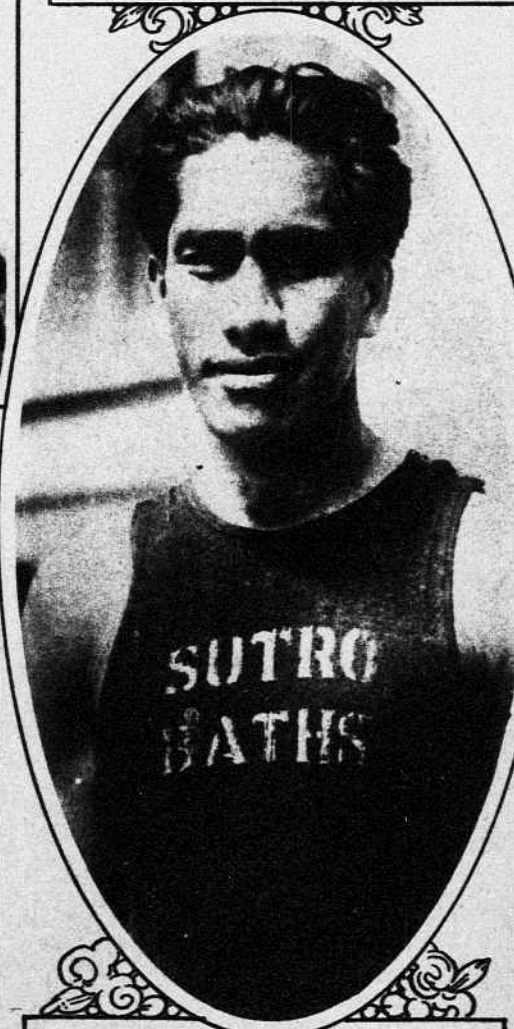

French hussars in the Somme sector, where the greatest battle in history is being waged; in this battle the cavalry of both the British and French have had their long-awaited-for opportunity to show their mettle.

(Copyright by International Film Service.)

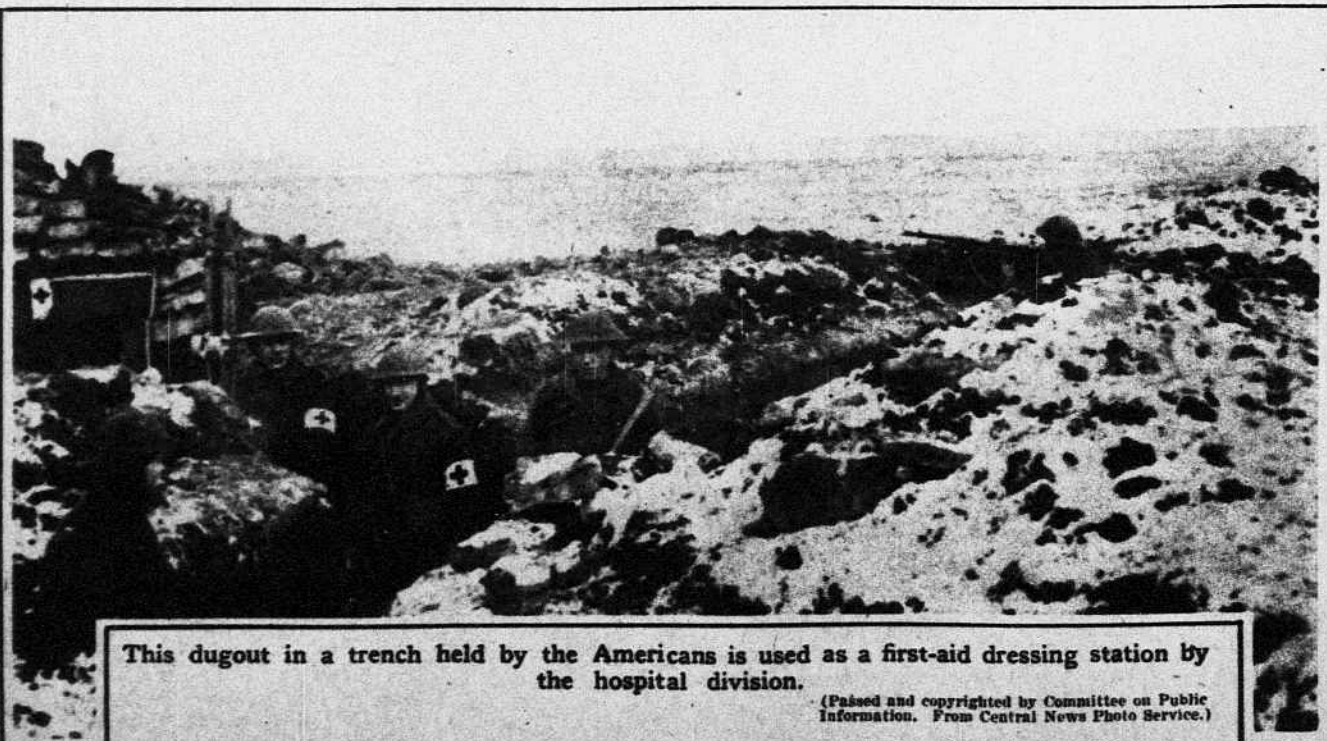

Latest type Handley Page British bombing plane, used over German cities.

(Photo by Central News Photo Service.)

Duke P. Kahanamoku, swimming champion of Hawaii, is to compete in 50 and 100 yard swims in the United States this summer.

(Photo from Underwood & Underwood.)

This dugout in a trench held by the Americans is used as a first-aid dressing station by the hospital division.

(Picked and copyrighted by Committee on Public Information. From Central News Photo Service.)

With gas mask in position and bayonet fixed, the U. S. marine, somewhere in Lorraine, awaits a Hun gas attack or a raid on the trench.

(Photo from Central News Photo Service.)